

Fly of the Month:
Blue Wing Olive Adult

Page 1

- Hatches
- Fall/Winter Fishing

Page 2

- Fly selections for:
- Low Elevation Waters
- High Elevation Waters
- Clearwater Drainage

Volume 2, Issue 8

August, 2010

Editor: Geoff Brumley

Dear Fly Fishing Enthusiasts

:Wow! September has been a fantastic month for our fishermen with emails and photos coming in from all over the country telling us their success and their favorite DFI dry flies. Our fishing expeditions have also been extraordinary—catching awesome brownies and rainbows on the Owyhee, the South Fork of the Boise River, and the Ranch section of the Henry's Fork. We also had the time to hit the high mountain lakes in the Gospel Peak area for cutties and brookies.

Now it's off to October, and we're approaching my ultimate favorite time to dry fly fish, which is late fall and early winter. Here's what to plan for in October. The way the weather is holding for the next couple of weeks, we'll still see major mayfly hatches in Calibaetis, Pinks, larger Baetis, and PMD's. If you're in higher elevations such as the Henry's Fork, you'll see the leading edge of the large midge hatches and they will intensify into the winter. Also, the BWO hatch will really explode at higher elevations and continue into the winter. On lower elevation rivers, DO NOT hesitate to tie on a Hopper or Cricket until the first hard frost. If you're headed to the alpine lakes and streams, the cinnamon, black, and red & black ants are killer, and the Emperor Caddis will still hook a bunch of fish.

Here's the fly section chart for the 2 phases of October:

Low Elevations before 1st Frost:

PMD Adult

Mahogany Adult

Baetis Adult

Brown Tantilizer

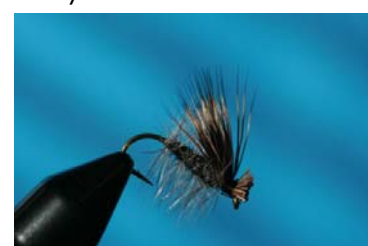

Gray Tantilizer

Baetis Tantilizer

Pink Tantilizer

Midnight Caddis

Black Gold #16 & #14

Geoff Brumley
Marketing Director

geoff@dryflyinnovations.com

Fishing the Northwest:

We are a phone call or an email away from a fly suggestion:

208-249-1178
208-867-4885

Or

info@dryflyinnovations.com

For Clearwater Drainage (Lochsa, Selway, Kelly Creek,
etc, it is Fall Caddis Time!

Volume 2, Issue 8

August, 2010

Page 2

Black Emperor Caddis

Baetis Emperor Caddis

White Emperor Caddis

Mohogany Searcher

Bullet Head Hopper

Cricket

Brown Searcher

Black Searcher

Gray Searcher

Please continue to submit your fish photos
and fishing experiences.
They are always appreciated

2nd Phase Low Elevations

BWO Adult

BWO No Hackle

BWO Emerger

Trico Upright Adult

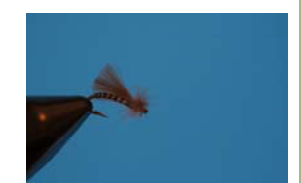

Black Emerger BS

Black No Hackle

Black Emerger WS

Caddidge

Blood Midge

Black Gold #16, #14

Baetis Tantalizer

All Adult Midges

Your fellow Fly Fishing Enthusiast,

Geoff Brumley